 (31/8/22) - After reviewing the feedback I have received for my DA pitch I have decided that the "TheInfamousCod" TikTok account I have created will now not only upload 'cool' videos, actions highlights and upcoming news, but also showcase a different side of the COD games franchise diving into the behind the scenes of the games. This idea will allow me to better target one of my 3 concepts of the

- "technology used to create the CoD games", uploading interviews of the game designers talking about the creation of the games, how the CoD games have developed over the years is content I can shift my focus too in order to achieve this new outcomes.
- (1/9/22) ^^ as seen above the response from my feedback and decision to include video content that is aimed at targeting behind the scenes footage and the technology used behind the CoD game Modern Warfare 2019 has driven my views from 2-3 to 71 in one upload and my likes from 1 to 8. Huge response from my audience based on this new directional upload.
- (2/9/22) Gained another follower, account now sits at 3 followers and 11 total likes.
- (9/9/22) TikTok page gained another follower now sits at 4 followers and 23 total likes.
- (15/9/22) Uploaded 'mini series' "Behind the Scenes of Call of Duty 2019" in sequel parts. Views, likes and comments are growing dramatically on those mini series videos in comparison to the previous 'gameplay highlights' I uploaded. Finally found content that is engaging a higher number of audience.
- (17/9/22) Using relevant hashtags such as #callofduty, #GameTikTok and #ModernWarfare2 as examples are helping with narrowing down the particular users I am trying to engage my content with.
- (21/9/22) The final video of my 'mini series' "Behind the Scenes of Call of Duty 2019" finished with part 6 gaining 134 views and 6 likes. In total the 'mini series' accumulated 700 total views, 46 total likes and 7 total comments, by far the most content interaction with any particular video content I have uploaded so far.
- (28/9/22) After the end of the 'mini series' interaction slowed down again, so I decided to create a new similar 'mini series' but with images. "Remembering the Call of Duty Games" is a new series with photos, wallpapers and in-game footage images from all the CoD games put into a video reel.
   (30/9/22) New 'mini series' "Remembering the Call of Duty Games", first upload recorded 67 views, 6 likes and 1 comment, again I have found content that engages with my particular audience and with the use of relevant hashtags my content can find those accounts.
- (10/10/22) After the success of my uploads detailing the story "Behind the Scenes of Call of Duty" I decided to upload a new series "How Call of Duty Cold War was made from home during the Pandemic", by IGN. This series' first video recorded 198 views, 8 likes and 1 save, smashing the previous mini series I posted.
- (14/10/22) Since the first upload of IGN's "How Call of Duty Cold War was made from home during the Pandemic" my page has since gained 3 new followers and my views are now reaching past the 300 number, as well as my likes sitting in the low 20s. Content I am posting is really starting to engage with my audience interactively.
- (14/10/22) I have since noticed that to best suit my audience and engage with them the 'mini series' content is far more accepted then simple highlight videos or upcoming news/dates. My audience enjoys watching and interacting with 'mini series' videos.
- (17/10/22) Final part of the "How Call of Duty Cold War was made from home during the Pandemic" series was uploaded 1 day ago. The final video recorded 372 views, 24 likes and 3 saves, as was my page gaining an extra 2 followers taking it to 9.

- (18/10/22) Started a new mini series, "Call of Duty: Modern Warfare Behind the scenes at Infinity Ward Studios. This 3 part series has gained me 5 new followers, 15-20 likes and a few hundred more views.
- (19/10/22) Over the few weeks my TikTok page has developed from a highlights page to a mini series, behind the scenes story page delivering interview and video footage of how the Call of Duty games were developed.
